

The Proposal and the Adjustment

CultureHub LA · residency 16–25 September 2026 · artist-page form due today

What was submitted in May and what is prepared in August are two different programs — and the artist statement is the only field where anyone will see it.

The five changes — what they graded, what they would now receive

	Submitted 21 May	Prepared now
Work	Notepat Jam , one work, ~30 minutes	Two jammies plus a guest set. The first keeps the accepted name inside its new one: Note(s)pat(ial)
Hardware	Six salvaged laptops. “No new equipment is fabricated for the show.”	Nine laptops: six salvaged, three MacBook Neos bought new
Instrument	notepat, on AC Native, on all six machines	notepat/AC Native for one work; Menu Band on macOS for the other
Workshop	Bring any laptop, boot AC Native, leave with an instrument	Menu Band Jam — requires a Mac; AC Native boot demoted to an alternative
Network	Six machines on the studio LAN, “no internet, no cloud”	NTP clock sync, and guest Wi-Fi requested for the workshop

what they graded what they would now receive reverses a claim rather than restating it

The ecological answer is the one that reverses a claim the jury read. The other four are presentational. Two submitted promises are also unaddressed: the livestream (now “requested, TBD”) and the open-source release of the multitrack and the AC Native image. `system/public/culture-hub-2026/` still reads Notepat Jam · submitted and now contradicts the program.

The statement — pick one

First person, 50–100 words, printed as a quotation credited to you.

A — recommended

At CultureHub I’m presenting two new pieces, one for AC OS and one for macOS. Note(s)pat(ial) spreads notepat across six surplus grade-school laptops, each booted into AC OS, the operating system I make; from a live control surface I turn the whole sound field through the room. The MacNeoPolitan Trio is newer and still taking shape — three MacBook Neos, each played through Menu Band, my menu-bar piano. One runs on machines pulled back from e-waste, the other on machines bought new.

82 words. The first title still contains the one they accepted, so the programme reads as an expansion of Notepat Jam rather than a replacement for it. “Still taking shape” keeps the second half free to change.

B — fallback

At CultureHub I’m turning six salvaged laptops into one instrument. Each boots into AC Native, the operating system I make, and takes a single channel of the studio’s surround system, so the audience sits inside the sound rather than facing it. From a live control surface I rotate the whole field through the room, change its speed, and move voices between machines. The instruments are rescued, not bought — I want a computer to hold an instrument the way it holds a clock.

83 words. Keeps the ecological answer intact and names no work title, so the second half can arrive later. A retreat: it hides a decision already made, and the set list would then contradict the artist page.

Open items

ACTION — SIX DAYS OPEN

The corrected LOA is unsigned. CultureHub sent it 5 August and the August 3 reply had offered to re-sign immediately. `README.md` still lists this as awaiting them. Clear it alongside the form.

ACTION — BEFORE ANY PUBLIC LISTING

Who is the guest? Nobody named or asked. A guest changes the running time, the rider, whether a fee is owed out of the $2,000, and the credit line CultureHub publishes.

HEDGED, NOT BLOCKING

The third MacBook Neo is not purchased. Blush, indigo and citrus are Apple’s own colour names; do not describe the finish further until it is in hand. Statement A’s “still taking shape” is what makes naming it safe now.

DO NOT SEND

`artist-page-packet.pdf` is stale — single-work statement, bio without Menu Band, blue-background headshot, old project image. Today is a form, so nothing needs regenerating.

The full-res program image is gone. Only the 900×600 `brief/media/mn-program.jpg` survives. Regenerate from `program.illy.txt` before any poster send.

Still awaiting CultureHub: public-programme dates and times, the technical contact, the equipment inventory. Working technical deadline 16 August.

SUBMITTED six salvaged

NOW six salvaged + three bought new

