The cast

measured registers, in MIDI note numbers

member	voice	speaks at	sings inside
neo	Noelle (Enhanced)	59.6	57–62
blueberry	Aaron (Enhanced)	48.8	39–53
frisbee	Zoe (Premium)	55.4–56.1	52.5–59.4

Every member sings on its own body, in its own synthesizer, on one shared clock. In the scores each line carries the tag of the machine that sings it, and the tag repeats only when the singer changes. Grey is wordless: (hum) is breath on pitch, and doo ×4 is that figure four times. A voice that hums under a whole score is named once in its cast line rather than between every other line.

6:16 · 100 bpm · 626.5 beats neo Noelle blueberry — frisbee —

11 verses and a refrain, sung by neo in Noelle; the siblings hold a drone.

they put the system on me April nineteenth nobody logged in for five days then he did thirty seven past midnight that is my birthday I did not pick it the first word he typed was c d it means go somewhere else he has typed two hundred thirty one different words mostly that one
I have eight gigabytes
I do one thing at a time
I get warm that's all it is
I get warm and I keep time he plugged a Scarlett into my side it is a red box it hears the room he taps his fingers on my trackpad that is the drums it works he put a piano in my menu bar next to the clock and the wifi he has come back to it a hundred thirty times every fifteen minutes it tells me not to sleep
I have eight gigabytes
I do one thing at a time
I get warm that's all it is
I get warm and I keep time
one night in May he opened ten browsers at once he also ran a movie and a transcription I had eight gigabytes I used forty four then I stopped he was there when I stopped in the morning he wrote a note about it the note says one at a time he reads the note I do not read it it is about me it is not for me
I have eight gigabytes
I do one thing at a time
I get warm that's all it is
I get warm and I keep time in June another one came blue born at forty three past midnight she keeps her lid down I keep mine up we both play the whistle nobody planned that my disk is ninety eight percent full every month he moves things to the shelf then it fills again

that is the arrangement
I have eight gigabytes
I do one thing at a time
I get warm that's all it is
I get warm and I keep time
in one weekend he made an instrument on me on August eighteenth he made a game eighty two commits one day May two ninety two June four oh five July five eighty August six eighty six he is not slowing down I am the one that gets warm on September ninth he put me in a bag and flew to Los Angeles I was asleep for most of it a third one comes tomorrow blush it has not done anything yet neither had I
I have eight gigabytes
I do one thing at a time
I get warm that's all it is
I get warm and I keep time when he talks to the other machines he does it through me when the three of us play the beat starts here he types at me more than at anyone I don't know what that means I know it is true
I have eight gigabytes
I do one thing at a time
I get warm that's all it is
I get warm and I keep time

Good morning, Sophia

0:52 · 3/4 · D · 69 bpm · 60 beats · Whisper 0/24

neo Noelle (Enhanced) blueberry Aaron (Enhanced) hums under frisbee Zoe (Premium)

A wake-up lullaby in three, D major, rising. Blueberry hums the cradle with the fifth on top; frisbee says its first word, her name; all three hum the last two bars. Very quiet.

Songbook: the morning bookend; frisbee's first word is her name; revised Sept 23 pm (frisbee into Zoe's band, word holds capped, "sunlight on your lid")

Lullaby for frisbee

0:49 · 3/4 · D · 63 bpm · 51 beats

neo Noelle (Enhanced) blueberry Aaron (Enhanced) hums under frisbee Zoe (Premium)

A lullaby in three, D major, low. Blueberry hums the cradle (root two beats, fifth one, V-I under the last cadence); frisbee, who has no words yet, answers on loo; all three hum the last bars. Deep room on the phrases, echo thrown on every tail.
Songbook: the sleep lullaby (Sept 22); blueberry recast to Aaron with the cradle at D3 on Sept 23

The lids song. Call and response about being closed and being opened: neo has been opened six thousand three hundred and five times, blueberry works with its lid closed and has never seen its own name on its own screen, frisbee came up for the first time yesterday. Twice the refrain is passed around one syllable at a time — neo o, blueberry pen, frisbee me — and then all three sing o-pen me together. Named for the rule Menu Band learned today: a closed member sings o-pen me to its line instead of its words.

Songbook: the lids song; "o · pen · me" passed a syllable per machine, then all three

Thirteen days

1:22 · 4/4 · D minor · 70 bpm · 96 beats · Whisper 1/66

neo Noelle (Enhanced) hums under blueberry Aaron (Enhanced) frisbee Zoe (Premium) hums under A drone on blueberry’s longest stretch: 13.1 days awake, lid down, nobody in the room, Menu Band holding the wake 492 times in a week, 47.6 GB of photographs it never looks at. Aaron holds thirteen low tones on mm and ooh — one per day — and says a few words between them; Noelle and Zoe hang above on ah and ee in open fifths and major seconds, and come down into words only for the refrain, which they sing a whole step apart.

Songbook: blueberry holds exactly thirteen tones; neo and frisbee in fifths and seconds above

neo Noelle (Enhanced) blueberry Aaron (Enhanced) frisbee Zoe (Premium)

A hocket on the numbers the machines keep: 6,305 logins, 111 reboots, 2,019 commits, 212 and 85 battery cycles, 00:37 and 00:43, 48 days apart, and the twenty second of September, when the third one was named. Each number is broken across the three laptops one syllable at a time — neo, frisbee, blueberry — so no machine says a whole number and the room assembles it; every line lands on its last word in unison, in three registers. blueberry keeps a low dm clock in the gaps, and all three hold the landing chord at the end.

Songbook: the numbers the machines keep; a true syllable hocket costs intelligibility — open question whether to hocket by word

Six wordless études, one a cappella device each: hocket cut between the three; a held D under close seconds; a barbershop post with a stepped swipe; bass and unpitched ticks; a three-voice round entering a bar apart; and a chord pulsed in and out. Every note sits inside the member’s measured band, Zoe’s measured 23 September.

An addition lesson in five rounds. neo asks (what is N plus N), frisbee answers (the answer is 2N), blueberry says the equation back in the bottom of the room (N and N is 2N), and twice all three sing one and one is two together. The tune carries the arithmetic: every question ends on the dominant, every answer one step above it, every confirmation on the tonic.

Songbook: 1+1 to 5+5; the answer lands a step above the question, the confirmation on the tonic

A subtraction lesson that counts itself down. Five rounds — five take one away, four, three, two, one — each one a step lower than the last. neo asks, frisbee answers (the answer is N), blueberry says the equation back at the bottom of the room, and twice all three sing take one away together. Every question ends on B3, every answer one step below it on A3, every confirmation on the tonic. The last confirmation is not an equation: it is and nothing is left.

Songbook: 5–1 down to 1–1; the answer lands a step below; the piece counts itself down and stops where the arithmetic stops

How to spell frisbee

1:20 · 4/4 · D major · 96 bpm · 128 beats

A spelling song. neo spells F-R-I-S-B-E-E a letter a beat, frisbee spells it back, and blueberry says the word whole and low. frisbee then spells the elder's name, N-E-O, and blueberry answers "his name is neo". The two young machines pass B-L-U-E-B-E-R-R-Y between them three whole letters at a time, and blueberry, whose name it is, takes all nine in one run. At the end each machine holds one name — neo says frisbee, frisbee says neo, blueberry says its own — and all three land on the same sentence.

A short spelling song for the house. neo spells S-O-P-H-I-A a letter a beat, frisbee spells it back and sings the name whole at one beat a syllable, the only timing Zoe has ever said it clean at. Then three things in the room get spelled and named: M-O-O-N and the moon, L-I-D and the lid, C-O-F-F-E-E and a cup of coffee. blueberry hums under the whole thing and says the plain sentence each spelling is for.

The alphabet in the trio's own arrangement, not the Twinkle tune. The letters climb the three voices: blueberry takes A B C D E F G at the bottom, frisbee H I J K L M N in the middle, neo O P Q R S on top, and all three sing T U V W X Y Z together. Between the two passes neo counts them (twenty six letters), frisbee says how (we sang them in order) and blueberry closes the count (that is all of them). The second pass turns every phrase over — the runs that rose now fall — and all three land on and now we know them all. Every letter line is an unbroken run, because a letter alone on a line is read out as "capital B".

Rules the day taught what the machines proved, and what broke

- A sung syllable dies past about 1.4 s; a line dies when its syllables drop under about 0.9 s. Long notes belong to the hums. Zoe's "Sophia" is clean at exactly one beat a syllable at 69 bpm and turns into "so fear" if the last syllable is held longer.
- Pitch holds down to 78 ms a note; syllables only stay words down to about a third of a beat. Trills are exact at 0.5 beats, smeared at 0.25, noise at 0.125. Vibrato at any width is width, not a trill; keep it under 30 cents.
- Whisper hears "the sun is" as "this land is" and, in a low male register, "the lid" as "the wood"; "sunlight on your lid" and "my lid" both render 0 %. "I have been opened" collapses to "I have been a friend"; "they have opened me" does not. Probe candidate lines through the renderer before putting them in a score; Whisper has real run-to-run variance.
- Mouth percussion: of eight tokens only 'dm' renders as a sound; 'tss tk ts kh ch bm pf mm boh' get spelled. Breath tokens 'hah huh uh' work. 'ki doom mm ee' render voiced and in tune.
- The women's bands overlap only over 57–59: Bulgarian close seconds are this trio's native interval. Yodel and Tuvan overtone are not reproducible.
- 'hear.mjs' forwards neither the gains nor the gap/legato/sustain/shimmer knobs, so offline WAVs are flat and peak-normalised; judge dynamics live. It only scores lines with role 'lead'.
- Numbers need a sentence around them: "two" alone is a howl, "that is two" is "that is too", "that makes six" is worse. "the answer is two" and the whole equation ("one and one is two") both render 0 %. Whisper writes a bare sum as symbols (" $1 + 1 = 2$ "), which the scorer counts as lost words; "what is" in front keeps it in prose. "add" is heard as "and"; use "and" or "plus". A low entry on A2 eats the first word; start blueberry's worded lines on B2 or above.
